Summary

Major League Baseball's annual First-Year Player Draft began in June, 1965. The purpose of the draft is to assign amateur baseball players to major league teams. The draft order is determined based on the previous season's standings, with the team possessing the worst record receiving the first pick. Eligible amateur players include graduated high school players who have not attended college, any junior or community college players, and players at four-year colleges and universities three years after first enrolling or after their 21st birthdays (whichever occurs first). From 1966-1986, a January draft was held in addition to the June draft targeting high school players who graduated in the winter, junior college players, and players who had dropped out of four-year colleges and universities. For the first two years (1965 and 1966), there was also an August draft for eligible players who participated in amateur summer leagues. Prior to 2012, the draft continued until all teams had finished selecting, which resulted in a high of 100 rounds in 1996. From 2012-2019, the draft was limited to 40 rounds, and in 2020 the draft was limited to five rounds due to the COVID pandemic. In 2021, the draft was held in July in conjunction with the 2021 Major League Baseball All-Star Game and was limited to 20 rounds.

To date, 75,283 players have been selected in the First-Year Player Draft from all sources. Among those are 26,157 players selected directly from High Schools in the United States and the District of Columbia. For the High School selections that don't sign, many will be drafted again, sometimes multiple times. The percentage of U.S. High School selections in each draft has been steadily declining from about 49% in the 1960's to about 23% in recent years. That trend is likely due to a combination of factors: (1) additional High School selections from American Territories and Non-U.S. sources since 1989 and 1991, respectively; (2) draft round reductions; (3) increasing exposure of College baseball; and (4) "signability" concerns. Teams are often hesitant to utilize one of their limited number of picks on a High School player who may not sign due to college commitment, financial issues, etc.

For all the draft picks by the thirty current major league franchises, the following shows their percentage of High School selections. The Braves have the greatest percentage of High School selections while the Giants have the lowest percentage. To date, about 14% of the High School selections have played in the majors. Of course, that percentage will naturally increase as recently selected players work their way to "The Show".

Angels – 30%	Giants – 27%	Rangers/Senators – 35%
Astros – 36%	Indians – 33%	Rays – 39%
Athletics – 28%	Mariners – 33%	Red Sox – 40%
Blue Jays – 33%	Marlins – 35%	Reds – 38%
Braves – 42%	Mets – 40%	Rockies – 30%
Brewers – 35%	Nationals/Expos – 35%	Royals – 37%
Cardinals – 28%	Orioles – 37%	Tigers – 33%
Cubs – 35%	Padres – 30%	Twins – 37%
Diamondbacks – 28%	Phillies – 35%	White Sox – 36%
Dodgers – 39%	Pirates – 40%	Yankees – 34%

Position wise for the High School selections, pitchers (46%) are the most frequently selected, followed by outfielders (19%), shortstops (12%), catchers (11%), third basemen (5%), first basemen (5%), and second basemen (2%).

In the 57 years since the regular summer draft began, the following 26 U.S. High School players have been the first overall selection. Ten have been from High Schools in California, three from Georgia, two each from Florida, North Carolina, and Pennsylvania, and one each from Illinois, Maryland, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Texas, and Virginia. Three of them have been inducted to date into the National Baseball Hall of Fame: Harold Baines, Ken Griffey, Jr., and Chipper Jones.
